The Document Delivery Caucus met at the 2013 AALL Annual Meeting. The meetings consist of open discussion on specific topics, and also provide the opportunity for attendees to raise document delivery questions. Discussions are always lively with many good pointers and tips shared.

The Caucus maintains a list of law libraries that provide fee-based document delivery services, as well as a general page of document delivery information and key links, such as a link to the national Interlibrary Loan Code. These pages were reviewed looking to ways to improve the content and accessibility.

This coming year there are a number of projects planned. All law libraries will receive an email inquiring as to whether their library has a fee-based service in order to expand and clean up the existing list. The list of document delivery providers, and the page of general information will be reorganized. The Caucus will also finalize its mission statement and bylaws, and create a resource list of member “experts” in document delivery.
