This year, the Environmental Law Libraries Caucus was founded and chaired by Emily Marcum. The Caucus, with help from David Selden, and in conjunction with the Social Responsibilities SIS and the Native Peoples Law Caucus, sponsored a carbon offset program. Dirty energy heaters which in some cases used up to 50% of a Native American resident’s income were replaced with clean solar heaters. The solar heaters were constructed using Native American labor, creating temporary employment in an area where unemployment can exceed 30%.