

WHAT the STADIUM STANDS FOR

Culture In the Campanile, the Colonnade, and the Court of Honor. They will embody what is best in the spirit and history of Illinois—aspiration in the soaring campanile, devotion in the court of honor, which commemorates the sons of Illinois who fought in the great war and still live, and sacrifice in the colonnade, which commemorates those sons who fought and died.

Sportsmanship In the Stadium itself. The sincerity and utility of construction in this part of the building will comply with the ideal of true and manly sportsmanship to which Illinois adheres. Strength and simplicity are the qualities to be represented here.

Loyalty In the whole memorial. Illinois needs something which will belong to the oldest graduate and the youngest freshman, and which through this common ownership will draw all classes together. The Stadium will become the symbol of a new, united, fighting, aspiring tribe of Illini, who know how to honor their living heroes and venerate their dead.
