Sophie Pregel (1894-1972), born in Odessa, was a student of theatre in Odessa and St. Petersburg, and followed a career as a poet, writer, translator, organizer, editor and correspondent. She emigrated in 1922 to Paris and later moved to New York, where she published the journal Novoselye (1942-50). She published six collections of poetry in Paris, including: "Razgovor s pamiat'iu," 1935; "Solnechnyi proizvol," 1937; "Polden'," 1939; "Berega," 1953; "Vstrecha," 1958; and "Vesna v Parizhe," 1966. Her lyrics show the influence of Russian Modernist poets and many of her themes revolve around her native land. In her efforts as a publisher, she sought to unite the emigré community of Western Europe and North America to establish ties with the Soviet Union and to acknowledge the heroic struggle of the Russian nation during World War II. Ms. Pregel had the distinction of earning the recognition of both emigré and Soviet literary communities.

Novoselye, published in New York and Paris from 1942 to 1950, was a literary journal established by Sophie Pregel. She was assisted by Mark Slonim and other members of the Russian emigré community in the United States. The purpose of the journal was to establish an independent organ devoted to literature and culture that would cross political boundaries, to maintain a continuity by the publication of a literary journal at a time when the center of emigré cultural life in Paris was occupied by the Nazis, to channel the creative potential of Russian Community abroad, to establish links with the homeland and the serve as a source of cultural and historical information on the United States. Over forty issues of the magazine were published with a consistently high level of quality and contributions from such eminent figures as Ivan Bunin, Aleksei Remizov, Nadezhda Teffi and Iurii Terapiano. Ms. Pregel served as a frequent contributor and translator as well as the organizer and editor of the journal, which moved to Paris in 1948.
